We acknowledge that Rocky Mountain House National Historic Site is within the present-day territory of the Treaty 6 as well as the Métis Homeland. The lands and waters of Rocky Mountain House have been used for millennia by Indigenous Peoples for sustenance, ceremony, trade and travel. We thank them for their continuous stewardship and for sharing the land with us.

The forts are gone, but the stories live on; stories of trade, exploration and competition, but above all, stories of people.

In 1799, the North West and Hudson’s Bay companies set up rival posts here on the North Saskatchewan River. During the 76-year history of trade at the site, nine different Indigenous groups visited the area. David Thompson – explorer, fur trader, and renowned map maker – and his wife Charlotte Small, used this post as a base for discovering a pass through the Rocky Mountains.

Today, Parks Canada shares the stories of the many different people who have spent time on the banks of this historic river highway, and protects the archaeological remains of the four trading posts, and lands used by Indigenous Peoples for time immemorial. We are honoured to engage with community partners and Indigenous Peoples who share their stories of today, and breathe new life into the history of this land.

Stay awhile. Let your story become part of this place, too.

Confluence Heritage Society

Our mission is to preserve, support and promote our Western Canadian history, heritage, and culture. We are a non-profit organization that advocates and partners with Rocky Mountain House National Historic Site. We produce the family favourite David Thompson puppet show and work together with Parks Canada and community partners to promote and present special events, including Canada Day celebrations. Stop by our Trading Post Gift Shop located in the Visitor Centre and browse our unique selection of local artisan merchandise.

David Thompson and Charlotte Small

David Thompson was 14-years old when he set out to map the land we now know as Canada. Between 1792 and 1812 he mapped 3.9 million square kilometres, about 1/6th of the North American continent. He first came to Rocky Mountain House in 1800 with his wife, Charlotte Small, using the fort as a base for his trans-mountain travels. His 1814 “Great Map” of his explorations envisioned the Canada to come.

David and Charlotte spent a number of winters here and had their first child at the post. Small was a great partner for Thompson. Raised by a Cree mother and a Scottish father, she was familiar with both Indigenous customs and languages and those of the traders. Unlike many fur traders, Thompson did not abandon his ‘country wife’ when he retired from the trade. Instead, they moved with their children to eastern Canada, were married in a formal church wedding, and spent the rest of their lives together.

David and Charlotte, true adventurers, have been recognized as persons of National Historic Significance (Canada).

Métis Local 845

We are pleased to showcase an authentic mid-1800s Métis Cultural Campsite. Experience life from the Fur Trade, one of the pivotal eras in Canadian history. Share our culture and traditions such as fiddle music, jigging, beading, and the all-important buffalo hunt. Learn the significance of the fur trade, the Red River Cart, and the York Boat. Come visit us soon!

Âsokêwin Friendship Centre

Âsokêwin means “crossing a bridge.” Our mission is to encourage and promote the well-being of Indigenous people by strengthening individuals, family, and community. Our partnership with Parks Canada and the National Historic Site fosters a culturally-appropriate and safe space to enhance the commemoration of the contributions of Indigenous peoples, their histories and cultures. This partnership enhances the special relationship Indigenous people have with traditional lands of this area.

Grandmother Turtle Lodge Society

Our collaboration with Parks Canada has been an integral part of our ability to create and provide gatherings and ceremonies for our communities. The historic site provides a culturally-appropriate and safe space for people to connect to important teachings, nurture relationships with local Indigenous Elders, and share meaningful experiences with visitors that promote truth and reconciliation.

Sites of interest

1 Bison Lookout

Catch a glimpse of the small herd of plains bison that came from Elk Island National Park, where most of the world's purebred plains bison originate.

Note: These are wild animals.

Do not enter the bison paddock.

2 Cairn

This cairn commemorates the site's designation in 1926 as a National Historic Site of Canada.

3 Canoe Launch and Brierley Rapids

Start your non-motorized river adventure, or watch thrill-seekers test their canoeing and kayaking skills on the Brierley Rapids.

Note: Class III+ water rapids.

4 Centennial Canoe

To honour Canada's 100th birthday in 1967, an epic 5000-km canoe race from Rocky Mountain House to Montreal took place along this historic voyageur route. This is the actual canoe paddled by team Alberta.

5 Charlotte Small and Alexander Henry Plaques

Charlotte Small came to the area in 1800 with her explorer husband, David Thompson. Of Cree-Scots background, she played a valuable role in the fur trade and is recognized as a National Historic Person. Alexander Henry was a fur trader and explorer. His journals are one of the best records of the early 19th century fur trade.

6 Listening Stations

These interpretive story stations can be found along the Chimney Trail and the David Thompson Trail.

7 Paul Kane Plaque

Paul Kane was a famous Irish-born Canadian painter, who spent time at Rocky Mountain House in the late 1840s. Dedicated in 1952, this plaque commemorates Kane as a National Historic Person.

8 War Memorial

This monument honours the men and women from the Rocky Mountain House region who served in the First and Second World Wars, the Korean War, and the Afghan War.

9 York Boat

All aboard! Hop into a replica York Boat and imagine the three-month voyage to Hudson's Bay with your cargo of furs destined for England.

Fur Trade Forts – Archaeological Locations

F1 North West Company 1799 – 18??

Established in 1799 by the North West Company, this was the first trading fort in the region. Named Rocky Mountain House, the fort served as the company's main base of operations, hosting notable map maker David Thompson. This fort was in use until the North West Company merged with the Hudson's Bay Company in 1821. Visitors can view the archaeological excavation of features, related to the site's last occupation, including postholes, cellars, and fireplaces.

F2 Hudson's Bay Company 1799 – 18??

This fort, named Acton House, was built by the Hudson's Bay Company in 1799 and located only 35 metres away from the North West Company's fort. It gives you an idea of the extreme rivalry between the two fur trade companies. This fort was used until 1821. The volumetric iron bars show the historical size of Acton House.

F3 Hudson's Bay Company 1835 – 1861

In 1835, the Hudson's Bay Company replaced Acton House with this unique fort named Rocky Mountain House. This post saw hard times as the fur trade lost popularity. Abandoned in 1861, it burnt down in 1865.

F4 Hudson's Bay Company 1868 – 1875

Facing dwindling fur trade markets, the Hudson's Bay Company made one last-ditch effort to keep the area's fur trade alive. In 1868 the company built its grandest-ever fort, double the size of its predecessor. Unfortunately, this was not enough to keep business running, and in 1875, Rocky Mountain House closed for the last time, marking the end of the fur trade in this region. The twin chimneys are the only above-ground preserved structures of the fort.
