

Until the early 1880s, greeting cards were associated more with New Year's Day than with Christmas. Flowers and landscapes were the main themes until 1880 when the use of the Christmas card, using more childlike imagery, became established.

